Mission: Located on Mississippi State University's campus, the Institute administers and coordinates research programs dealing with water and related resources. Its activities are developed in close consultation and collaboration with leading water resources officials within the state. The Institute's purpose is to provide a coordinated research and development program that contributes to the solution of water and related land use problems in Mississippi, the region, and the nation.

The Institute's goals are to:

1. provide a center of expertise in water and related land problems and serve as a repository of knowledge for use in education, research, planning, and community service;
2. serve public and private interests to conserve, develop and use water resources;
3. provide training opportunities in higher education whereby skilled professionals become available to serve government and private sector alike;
4. assist planning and regulatory bodies at the local, state, regional, and federal levels;
5. communicate research findings to potential users in forms that encourage quick comprehension and direct application to water-related problems;
6. assist state agencies to develop and maintain a state water management plan;
7. facilitate and stimulate planning and management that:
 - deal with water policy issues;
 - support state water agencies' missions with research on problems encountered and expected;
 - provide water planning and management organizations with tools to increase efficiency and effectiveness of water planning and management.
